

Bidault Asks 21-Nations To Erase Plague Of Conflicts

Paris, July 29 (AP)—The 21-nation peace conference, convened formally in Luxembourg palace more than a year after the end of the second world war in Europe, was summoned by President Georges Bidault of France today to abolish "the plague of war."

Addressing the 1,500 delegates of the victorious allies on behalf of the host nation, Bidault pleaded:

"The long suffering peoples of the world today look to you. If we cannot get complete peace solutions, I hope that at least we will get reasonable ones."

In an apparent reference to the United States and Russia, Bidault said that whatever blame could be attached to the failure to keep the peace after the first world war, a "fundamental cause of that failure was that the two great powers who had taken a decided part in the conquest of arms remained on the sidelines during the solution of peace."

Named Chairman

"The hopes of plain men are turned toward us today," he said, concluding his 10-minute, slowly spoken speech. Bidault was then named provisional chairman of the conference on the motion of U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

Bidault's words were carried to a press gallery jammed for the historic occasion and throughout the rambling plush building as he summoned the delegates of the 21 victor nations to fashion a peace for Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Finland, which the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain, Russia and France can approve.

The conference convened, however, in an atmosphere of dissension.

For more than 36 hours the deputy foreign ministers of the four principal powers—Britain, France, Russia and the United States—had argued before agreeing even upon publication of the five treaty drafts prepared by the four powers for submission to the conference.

It finally was agreed to release the five treaty texts, along with statements on disagreements, at 11 p. m., Greenwich mean time (6 p. m., Eastern Standard Time) Tuesday.

The conference also opened with Secretary Byrnes ready to confront the delegates with the urging that they make all conference negotiation wide open to the press of the world.

2 BOYS PERISH
IN BLAZE THAT
BURNS 4 HOMES

Warren, Pa., July 29 (AP)—Two boys perished and their mother and two younger brothers suffered burns in a fire which destroyed four homes and damaged two others in nearby Clarendon borough early yesterday.

Coroner Ed Lowrey identified the dead as Raughland Confer, 11, and Harvey Confer, 12, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Confer.

Eleven persons were made homeless and the town was temporarily shut off from telephone communication when intense heat from the blaze burned off cables of the Bell company.

Lowrey said the blaze started in the Confer dwelling and wakened Mrs. Confer. Confronted by a sheet of flames as she opened her bedroom door, she grasped two children, Donald, 5, and Charles, 7, and staggered to safety. All three were taken to Warren hospital, where their burns were reported not serious.

Mrs. Confer's husband was already at the hospital with a broken leg he suffered recently.

Water Mains Dry

The fire, discovered about 2 a. m., spread quickly to the homes of Florence Spence, William Kirkpatrick, and Mrs. Carrie Armagost, but the occupants were rescued before all three blazing structures collapsed. Two other homes were scorched and damaged by smoke and water.

The fire fighting was complicated by the fact that Clarendon water mains had become dry because of a broken pipe which caused the reservoir to empty. An emergency source of water was found and two engine companies from Warren were hooked up tandem to provide water.

Chief Leonard Falbriski of the Clarendon fire department said the department reservoir had been checked last Friday and the water at that time was at the normal level.

The Confers have three other children in addition to the two in the hospital.

Burial services for the two boys will be held tomorrow.

CARS SIDESWIPE

No one was injured and damage totaled $45 when cars driven by Mary Elizabeth Cook, New Windsor, Md. R. 1, and George W. Funkhouser, Gettysburg R. 4 sideswiped two miles south of New Oxford on the Hanover road Saturday evening at 8:15 o'clock. State police who investigated said that Miss Cook was attempting a left turn when the accident occurred.

Yellowstone Movie Draws Good Crowd

More than 100 persons attended the first camp fire program arranged by Gettysburg National Park authorities Sunday night on East Cemetery hill, when an hour-long movie of the Yellowstone National Park, in technicolor, was shown.

The location was moved to the top of the hill near the General O. O. Howard monument because park authorities believed this area would be freer of mosquitos.

The programs will be continued during August. A movie on Mt. McKinley is scheduled to be shown Sunday night, it was announced.

LITTLESTOWN PAYS TRIBUTE TO VETERANS

"This is a happy occasion. The young men and women are returning to our firesides. We delight in their presence, we delight in their voices. Yet our happiness is tinged with sorrow, for not all have come back. A goodly percentage have given their lives for ideals of democracy, liberty, freedom of expression, the 'American way'. It is a good and lofty way, yet it was bought at a price, as all good things are bought at a price—the price of blood."

Thus the Rev. David S. Kammerer, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church of Littlestown, welcomed home the World War II men and women of Littlestown and vicinity at services held early Saturday afternoon on the playground. It was Littlestown's official Welcome Home celebration to World War II veterans.

He spoke from the platform of a truck covered with green sod from which with stark simplicity rose a mound of earth topped with a white wooden cross, a cross which the men who fought had seen often above the graves of their friends.

On the platform with him were the Rev. Kenneth D. James, the Rev. Robert H. Sheehan, the Rev. John C. Brumbach and the Rev. Frank E. Reynolds.

150 Veterans Present

More than 150 veterans of World War II, representing all branches of the service and the Waves and Wacs stood with bowed heads in a semi-circle before the platform with former Naval Lieutenant Thomas Maitland in charge.

Standing with the group was Army 1st Lieutenant Earl D. Sheely, son of Howard W. Sheely, Littlestown R. D., who came home for a brief leave before embarking for military government service in Korea to find that the town was celebrating the first anniversary of the end of the war with a welcome home celebration for its veterans. Sheely, a veteran of 24 years' service with the army, was home only for the day, and spent it with the other veterans.

Parents and friends, wives and children of the veterans gathered in another semi-circle to the rear of the platform.

Parade Follows

There was an utter stillness as the names of the men who died during World War II—Vernon E. Bauerline, Lowell F. Clark, Robert J. Collins, Albert D. Crabbs, Jr., Archie H. Peeser, Burley Ketterman, Earnest Mayers, David C. Mehring, Clarence R. Wisotzky, Richard M. Palmer, Vernon R. Sentz, Glenn (Please Turn to Page 2)

Seeks Power To Prevent Looting Of Public Funds

Washington, July 29 (AP)—Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren told Senate investigators that "it looked as if everybody and his brother were out to get the government during the lull war years."

Warren made this statement to the Senate War Investigating committee. At the same time, he appealed for greater powers for the general accounting office as "the last bulwark for the protection of taxpayers of this country against unbridled and illegal expenditures of public funds."

Some high officials of government, he said, accepted entertainment, including cocktail parties, hotel bills and even travel from contractors "while at the same time drawing travel expense and per diem (daily allowance) from the government."

This practice, he added, was "the rule rather than the exception."

"It got so bad in the Maritime Commission, for instance," Warren said, "that I called personally on Admiral Land (chairman) — whose name was not mentioned in any of the reports — and also wrote him of-

YOUNG FATHER OF 2 DROWNS EARLY SUNDAY

A three o'clock Sunday morning swimming party ended in tragedy when John Myers Benson, 31, New Oxford R. 1, an official for the Bethlehem quarries near New Oxford, apparently suffered an attack of cramps and drowned at Dick's Dam in Hamilton township.

Benson, who is married and the father of two children, is formerly of Minnesota. He was visiting friends at the Walnut Hill cottage at Dick's dam when he and three companions decided to go swimming early Sunday morning. Roger E. Johnson, Harold Hemler and Lawrence Kuhn, all of Hanover, who were swimming with Benson suddenly noticed that he had disappeared.

They swam about for a little while searching for Benson, who had apparently gone under the water without an outcry. They then roused cottage residents along the Dick's Dam colony. The group searched throughout the night and Sunday morning for the body.

At 10:15 o'clock Sunday morning, Joseph Bollinger, Hanover R. 3, a justice of the peace, who was utilizing a grappling hook which had been secured from the Hanover fire company, recovered the body.

Benson was described as a "good swimmer" and state police, who investigated believe that the man suffered a sudden attack of cramps while in the cold water and was unable to cry out for help from his companions. Dr. C. G. Crist, county coroner, said the death was accidental and caused by drowning. No inquest is to be conducted.

He is survived by his wife, the former Marjorie Mott, two daughters, Pauline and Mary, at home and his parents, Anthony F. and Gertrude Benson, Virginia, Minn. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

A charge of arson brought in 1944 against Charles P. Beers, Goldie Bortner and John and Richard Doe, alleging they set fire to a barn of Norman C. Miller, Tyrone township, causing $5,000 damage, has been nol-prossed in the county courts.

The original charge was laid by a Harrisburg state policeman while Beers was in the Eastern Penitentiary and Goldie Bortner was in the York county jail. District Attorney J. Francis Yake, signing the request for nolle prosequi, pointed out that insufficient evidence had been obtained to warrant continuation of the case.

To Sell Polling Place

The county court Saturday set August 23 for a hearing on a request by the Adams county commissioners to sell the Cumberland township election house lot on Steinwehr avenue to David A. Oyer, Gettysburg for $600. The petition set forth that the building on the lot is to be moved to some portion of Cumberland township now that the area on which it sets has been taken into the borough of Gettysburg, and that the county no longer has any use for the lot.

August 26 was set as the date for a hearing on a petition for temporary alimony and counsel fees brought by Louise Milhimes in the divorce action brought against her by her husband, Howard Milhimes. In her petition Mrs. Milhimes declares that she "has a just, full and complete defense to the libel." She says she is unemployed.

Change Admission Rule

The court amended its rule in regards to admission of lawyers to the Adams county bar so that those seeking admission now need serve a clerkship of only six months instead of a year. The amendment was entered following presentation of a petition signed by E. V. Balleit, chairman of the county board of law examiners.

In the petition Attorney Balleit pointed out that the change was recommended by the entire membership of the board of law examiners following a meeting at which the matter was considered.

A libel in divorce was entered by Wilmer C. Stevens, East Berlin R. D. versus Goldie Eva Stevens, Five Points, alleging desertion.

OLDEST SCHOOL DEEDED IN 1838 RECORDS SHOW

Two of the schools in Hamilton township that were closed this summer, Seven Hundred and Hartman's, served the people of that township for over 100 years, according to deeds filed at the office of the county register and recorder.

Oldest deed was one for 40 perches on which the Seven Hundred school was built. The deed, dated December 7, 1838, is written in scroll on parchment and details how Daniel Diehl and wife sold to Thomas E. Ehrhart, president of the board of directors of the Hamilton township free school the land for $20. The deed records that the plot was "part of a tract of 700 acres" and school officials said today that it was believed the name for the school came from that portion of the deed. The school was the oldest in the township.

The deed for the Hartman school shows that John and Susannah Mummert sold to the Hamilton township school board in 1842 the plot of land on which the school was built.

AIR OF ANXIETY CLOAKS OPENING PEACE MEETING

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

An atmosphere of deep anxiety surrounded the opening of the Paris peace conference today—anxiety born of uncertainty whether this historic meeting would break trail for real peace or whether it would be a harbinger of further conflict because of the great divergences between Russia and the Western Allies.

Secretary of State Byrnes on departure Saturday by air for the French capital left behind a message which contained this plain talk:

"It seems to me that the hope of avoiding some new terrible war greatly depends upon how quickly we can remove the dangerous sources of friction left in the wake of the last war."

Shortly afterward over in France General Charles De Gaulle, also made a blunt pronouncement in which he declared that world security depends upon "future relations of America and Russia." He pictured France dwarfed between two great powers and already able to foresee the possibility of a third world war. He urged quick formation of an Anglo-French alliance as keystone of an eventual bloc of Western European countries, bound together for self preservation.

Complicated Situation

It would be difficult to refute De Gaulle's statement that world security depends on future Russo-American relations, though that may be rather an over-simplification of a complicated situation. In any event, the great send-off which was given Secretary Byrnes in Washington by President Truman, numerous other government dignitaries and a crowd of several thousand spectators, fully marked the importance which Uncle Sam attaches to his envoy's mission.

"If that is not a whole hearted send-off," said the president, "I have never seen one. That means that the country is behind Mr. Byrnes in his efforts to get a just peace for the world, a peace founded on the Atlantic Charter of the United Nations on which this country squarely stands, now and from this time forward."

New Difficulty Arises

That's fine support for Mr. Byrnes to take into the peace conference. And he will need it, for sharp passages at arms are in sight between the American secretary and Russian Foreign Minister Molotov. For one thing a new and serious difficulty has arisen over Moscow's heavy reparations demands on shattered Hungary. America is insisting warmly that a new economic deal for Hungary is essential to European peace. Then there is the crisis in Austria revolving about Russia's seizure of the important industries in the Soviet zone for German reparations. The Balkans also provide fiery differences.

However, as I see it the crux of the matter doesn't lie in any one of these disputes but in this broad issue:

Just what is it that Russia wants — (1) In the way of expansion of her zones of influence, and (2) in the way of spreading communism to other countries?

America's offer to give up her secrets of the atomic bomb as soon as proper safeguards for handling atomic energy are provided, should be the best possible guarantee of good faith and a desire for peace. Russia, however thus far has given no sign that she is about finished with her program of expansion.

World peace certainly does depend on whether the Soviet is satisfied, or whether it intends to continue pressing for power.

HEIRENS WILL ESCAPE CHAIR BY CONFESSION

Chicago, July 29 (AP)—State's Attorney William J. Tuohy today will learn for the first time—officially—that William Heirens is ready to confess killing six-year-old Suzanne Degnan, ex-WAVE Frances Brown, and Mrs. Josephine Ross, a widow, defense counsel said.

Roland Towle said he and Heirens' four other lawyers will meet with Tuohy sometime today "to determine procedures Tuesday both when Heirens is arraigned in court and for the proposed confession."

Another defense attorney, Malachy Coghlan, announced Saturday that Heirens, 17-year-old University of Chicago student, was ready to confess formally three of the most lurid crimes in Chicago's history.

Will "Consider" Offer
The move was aimed at saving the youth from a possible penalty of death in the electric chair. Tuohy has said he would "consider" an offer of a confession in return for a life imprisonment recommendation.

Heirens was slated for arraignment tomorrow on Cook county grand jury indictments charging him with murder in the slaying and dismemberment last January 7 of the Degnan girl, and the shooting and fatal stabbing last December 10 of Miss Brown.

Tuohy has reported Heirens' fingerprints linked him to the Degnan and Brown crimes, but he had not disclosed any evidence tying the strapping, bushy-haired youth to the fatal throat-slashing on June 3, 1945, of Mrs. Ross.

Three Murders Admitted

"There is no need to quibble about the number of homicides," Malachy Coghlan has said, "there are three," and he included the Ross slaying among those with which the youth has been formally charged.

The Chicago Tribune, meanwhile, published an interview with Mrs. Margaret Heirens, in which the 40-year-old mother expressed hope that her son's life would be spared. "I believe Bill is a case of mental pathology and should be studied," she was reported as saying.

Waynesburgers Scan Skies For Traditional Rain

Waynesburg, Pa., July 29 (AP)—Waynesburgers scanned the skies today for the traditional rain which they felt sure would fall just as it has every other July 29 except three in the last 69 years.

Rain prophet John Dailey led the faithful to the courthouse steps at midnight last night to keep one of the nation's oddest vigils. At the first sign of a sprinkle, he was ready to dash to the courthouse tower and toll the bell 29 times.

Dailey, a Waynesburg attorney, annually bets some sports personage that it will rain. The "official sucker" this year is Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight boxing champion.

The wager is for $50. But the stakes, win or lose, go to a fund being raised for building a new public swimming pool in Waynesburg. Once rain has fallen, the town planned to stage its usual celebration, climaxed this year with an amateur boxing show.

Employees Seeking Share Of Profits

Pittsburgh, July 29 (AP)—The Duquesne Light company has been asked to share its profits with 3,500 employees and grant a general 20 per cent wage increase in a new contract to be negotiated for September 1, George Mueller, president of a public utility union, announced today.

Both employees and consumers would share in the utility's profits in excess of six per cent under the demand of Mueller's union, the Independent Association of Employees of Duquesne Light and Associated companies.

The union asked that the employees be given one-third and the consumers two-thirds of the excess. The excess profits, Mueller said, amount to $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 annually.

LITTLESTOWN

A. Snyder and Samuel E. Spangler were read.

After the service at the playgrounds the parade formed to begin the march through the streets of the town.

Heading the first division were Marshals Howard Worley and Holman Sell followed by the York Legion Drum and Bugle corps. Next in line, riding in cars, were Burgess Charles R. Mehring, members of the town council, members of the school board and the ministers.

The Veterans float, which had served as a platform at the playgrounds drove slowly along following the dignitaries. On it rode veterans representing a firing squad and bugler.

Next in line came the veterans, divided into a naval and an army segment. Among the 150 were men varying in rank from captain down to private. There were Marines, sailors, infantrymen, artillerymen, medics, air corps men, representative of every branch of service.

Shoulder patches on the men marked soldiers who had fought with all the great armies of the nation, in both European and Asiatic countries.

Whitely's float, a jeep pulling a 57 mm anti-tank gun, Girl Scouts troops 1, 2 and 3 and two fire trucks, completed the first division of the parade.

Clair and Mark Trostle were the marshals for the second division which was headed by the Taneytown high school band with Miss Phyllis Smith as drum majorette.

The first float was one proclaiming "Welcome home—the Borough of Littlestown."

Third Division
Windsor Shoe company, Blue Ridge and Carroll Shoe company and Schott's Hotel floats were next in line followed by the Strouse-Baer float which represented a party holidaying in the country.

Germany township's float was next followed by a Keystone cabinet company float depicting a wedding scene. The wedding scene was a favorite among the floats.

Granville Miller was marshal for the third division led by the Littlestown high school band. A float depicting the Eternal Peace Light prepared by the Lions was the first of a number of floats in the third division. Others were put in the parade by E. A. Rebert, Prince street, Jones Clothing company, Union township, William V. Sneiderger and Sons, and the Littonian Shoe company.

Bicyclists and horsemen and women concluded the division.

There were floats representing the "Peaceful Valley" to which the soldiers have returned. Prince street's float, developed by the people of the street, depicted a home and garden in which the homecoming veteran was being received by his family and friends. The flag raising scene on Okinawa was repeated on the Sneiderger float while the Statue of Liberty rose high above the heads of the crowd on the Littonian shoe float.

3,000 Jam Streets
An estimated 3,000 residents of Littlestown, and vicinity, jammed the streets of the borough, climbed trees and fire escapes to view the parade.

The day of celebration began with services in Littlestown's churches Saturday morning. Following the parade the York Legion Drum and Bugle corps marched to the playground and drilled before those as-

Incidentally, Mrs. Gaal's New Orleans stable won just $22,610 for all of 1945...

And along comes the Dude and picks up a neat $76,850 all in one chunk for them in the classic...

And how about the Dude, picked up for $4,000 as a player, bringing home that much hay in the classic, and Triplecote, bought off the bargain counter for $6,000 grabbing $79,900 for movie dancer Fred Astaire in the Hollywood gold cup the same afternoon...

That's what makes horse-racing—also pus plasma in the bank account.

QUIZ PROGRAM

FELLER CLOSE TO NEWHOUSER WITH 19TH WIN

By JOE REICHLER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Unless Cleveland's Bobby Feller or Detroit's Hal Newhouser hits an unexpected decline, there appears a good chance today, that the American league will furnish two 30-game winners this season.

Not since 1912 when the immortal Walter Johnson and Smokey Joe Wood reached the 30-victory mark did two great pitchers come along with such peerless parallel performances.

Following on the heels of Newhouser, who became the Major's first pitcher to win 20 games Saturday, Feller racked up his 19th triumph yesterday by shutting out the Washington Senators 2-0 in the opener of a doubleheader. The Indians also won the nightcap 7-4 to advance within three games of the fourth place Nats.

Newhouser was idle yesterday as the Tigers divided a double header with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The A's won 2-0 in the opener, but lost the nightcap 6-2.

Sox Maintain Lead

The pace-setting Boston Red Sox maintained their 11-game lead over the New York Yankees by gaining an even split with the St. Louis Browns. After Denny Galehouse had stopped them 3-2 in the first game, the Sox won 11-4 triumph in the afterpiece.

The Yankees also had to come from behind to break even. Blanked in the opener 2-0, the New Yorkers hopped on Ralph Hammer and two successors for 11 hits and an easy 7-1 win.

The second place St. Louis Cardinals narrowed Brooklyn's National league leading margin to a game and a half by blanking the Boston Braves 2-0 while the Dodgers were being humbled by Pittsburgh's Pirates 7-3.

The third place Chicago Cubs advanced to within six and a half games of first place by sweeping both ends of a twin bill from the Philadelphia Phillies 11-3 and 3-1.

Despite a pair of home runs by the Giant's Johnny Mize, which raised his league total to 22, the Cincinnati Reds downed the New Yorkers twice, 8-3 and 5-4.

HERMAN BARRON WINS "CIRCUS"

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, July 29 (AP)—Nervous Herman Barron, of White Plains, N. Y., who won $10,000 on a week-long diet of orange juice, and golf-don't generally agreed today that promoter George S. May's all-American fairways circus had lifted the sport into "big-time" business.

A crowd estimated by May at more than 32,000—tops for any golf event—watched Barron squeeze out a 72-hole aggregate of 280 for a one-stroke victory over ex-tennis player Ellsworth Vines in the finale of the all-American meet at Tam O'Shanter course yesterday.

Byron Nelson who had won four of the five previous all-American meets, finished in a three-way tie for seventh place with a feeble 287, one-under-par.

All in all, the Zany three-ringed circus marked an uprising by golf's have-nots. Vines, who has yet to win a major tournament, grabbed the second-spot professional money of $4,325 and Sammy Byrd nosed out leading-money winner Ben Hogan 284 to 285 for the third place swag of $3,500.

Amateur Winner
In the all-American amateur, George Hamer, fresh from the university of Georgia, where he won the 1946 National collegiate title, upset such favorites as Toledo's Frank Stranahan and Earl Stewart, 1941 National collegiate titlist from Dallas, Tex. Hamer posted 291, a stroke ahead of Stewart and two strokes in front of Stranahan whose closing four-under-par 68 came too late.

Favored Babe Didrikson Zaharias of Denver, Colo., copped the all-American women's open with a 310 aggregate six over women's par, but still seven strokes ahead of runner-up Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Texas, who had 317.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO
Linnaean Hall: The exercises connected with the laying of the Corner Stone of the new building designated as a hall for the use of the Linnaean Association of Pennsylvania college on Thursday, drew together the largest audience that we have ever seen assembled on a similar occasion.

In consequence of the absence of the Hon. Mr. Levin (through illness), the exercises preparatory to the laying of the Corner Stone which were to have taken place in the grove in the rear of the college grounds, were transferred to the English Lutheran church. Accordingly, at 9 1/2 o'clock a procession, preceded by the Neville Brass band, formed at the college edifice and proceeded to the church, where, after an eloquent and fervent prayer by President Krauth, the audience was seated with able and interesting speeches by Professor Haldeeman and the Rev. Mr. Conrad—well meant, of course, such as were fortunate enough to get within hearing: for long before the procession arrived, the large building, with the exception of a few reserved seats, was densely crowded to the exclusion of large numbers who were reluctantly compelled to retire.

The exercises in the church being concluded, the procession re-formed and proceeded to the college campus, where the Corner Stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies, in the presence of from one to two thousand spectators. . . . The authors were deposited in the Corner Stone by the Hon. James Cooper who gave a few appropriate and eloquent remarks upon the beauties and benefits of a persecution of the study of the Natural Sciences.

A letter was received from Governor Shunk, whose presence had been anticipated, stating that in consequence of an unexpected press of public business he was reluctantly compelled to be absent.—Star

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Sunday School Picnic: The infant department of St. James Sunday school held their annual picnic several weeks ago. On Wednesday the balance of the school spent the day near Spangler's Spring, and of course had a pleasant time.

Temperance: On Wednesday two Temperance organizations were represented in Gettysburg—the Grand division of the Sons of Temperance of Pennsylvania holding its third quarterly session in Red Men's hall, on Carlisle street, and the Good Templars holding a quarterly meeting of county lodges in the Good Templar hall, on Baltimore street. A public Temperance meeting was held in Agriculture hall on Tuesday night.

At the meeting of the Grand division on Wednesday the following representatives of subordinate divisions were introduced and initiated: Messrs. Peter Warren, D. L. Smith, J. H. Skelly, David Culp, J. J. Myers, A. W. Flemming, Joseph Mannock, John Scott, M. L. Gates and D. A. Buehler.

At a meeting in Fairfield the following representatives were introduced and initiated: Messrs. E. McGinley, George P. Sites, J. T. Bowman, J. H. Moore, W. T. King, J. S. Witherow and Charles J. Sefton.

Married: Rife-Rebert. — On the 16th inst., by the Rev. J. Sechler, Mr. Cornelius Rife, of Adams county, to Miss Barbara Rebert, of York county.

Wagner-Townsend: On the 27th inst., in Bendersville, by the Rev. J. B. Jones, Mr. Wm. C. Wagner to Miss Anselm C. Townsend, both of this county.

Iron Ore: The successful operation of the Magnetic Iron Ore bank on the Comfort farm, in Franklin township, has induced parties to look up indications of similar ore in other parts of the county. It is said an ore bank has been opened on the farm of Mr. A. P. White, in Freedom township, which promises to pay well.

ROAMING ABOUT WITHOUT A PLAN

There are times when intelligent loafing is an occupation well worth while, especially during a change, or a vacation. Just wandering around, with eyes open, and a heart responsive. Wholly without plan, but not purpose — that purpose being to learn something new, to gain some undiscovered knowledge.

Too many people get all mixed up in a plan, losing the spiritual significance of life itself. Our lives tighten up when too much regimentation is put into a plan. Rather should there be "one increasing purpose" controlling our lives. The plan will then take care of itself.

I liked the title of a very fine book on old Walt Whitman, and I immediately bought it. It was called "The Magnificent Idler." Walt Whitman drank freely from every sight in nature. On Fifth Avenue buses, in New York City, he loved to ride and watch people and sights. He liked to sit on benches in the parks, and note Nature's unfolding at first hand. He was fascinated with streams, and woodlands, and man and Nature was his universe. He wrote: "I am immense!"

There is no day here at Weskewaak that is uninteresting. Outside the daily writing of these brief Talks, I have no plans. I just let the day unfold. Familiar paths are trod again and again, and every time new interests appear. It may be the song of a new bird, or a winged stranger, dropping off at the island for a rest or investigation. This year a brood of muskrats have appeared in the lagoon and I have been studying their habits and mode of life with great interest. They dive in the stream, and wander about upon the rocky shore. They seem extremely happy and contented and pay little attention to my watching.

Occasionally a deer will come out in the evening and dine upon some special liking, and early one morning we saw a deer and two dogs swimming by the island. They are beautiful animals, and I would not harm one under any circumstances, destructive as they often are to gardens. Later in the season new flowers will appear, and the blue berries and huckleberries will be abundant — highly welcomed under present fruit scarcity.

And so I glory, for a brief period, in just roaming about, without a plan, as anyone can, if he will but choose to do so. And you don't have to have an island on which to do it either!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Daybreak."

THE CHILDREN
In a silent house I've dwelt
Much too long;
All the loneliness I've felt,
Missing song;
Missing every merry shout
Of the children round about.
Missing chatter sweet to own,
Sitting down to tea alone.

I have stared at empty chairs
Where I've sat.
All alone I've climbed the stairs,
Hating that.
Now I've learned no tone's so sweet
As the sound of children's feet,
And the house is dull without
Little ones to race about.

Do the children bother you
With their noise?
Do you think that much they do
Peace destroys?
Oh, be glad your house is filled
With a clamor never stilled,
For it's heartache that you own
Dismal silence, all alone!

serving fruit in cans had its origin in Gettysburg, as the result of experiments made by the late Doctor Jacobs, in the winters of 1845 and '46. Knowing that meats had long been preserved in cans, and referring to the preservation of fruit by means of sugar to the action of the syrup in excluding the air, he contended that a better and more economical application of the same principal might be made. Reducing the fruit to a pulp, or surrounding it with a sufficient amount of liquid to fill up spaces, the air was expelled by raising the heat to the boiling point. The cans being then filled, and soldered so as to be airtight, the experiment proved a perfect success. Communicated at first to a few of his friends, the art was rapidly made known, so that in three years time, it had spread to all parts of the country.

HODGE-PODGE OF OFFICES IN U.S. GOVERNMENT

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, July 29 (P)—Does it get you down when you can't figure out what all the names and terms and titles inside the government mean?

Don't worry. You have plenty of company. What's the difference between a department, an office, a division, a bureau, an authority, a board, a commission? Is there a difference between them? Sometimes. Sometimes not. Why?

It just happened that way over the years. Same thing—Or Different.

Usually, and rightly, you think of a department as being one of the 10 cabinet departments, like the Department of Agriculture, or State, or Treasury.

But some units inside an agency are called departments—just because someone wants to call them that—like the "Power department" or the "Management Service department."

An "Office" and a "Bureau" may really mean the same things, or different things.

The main divisions of the State department are called "Offices," like the "Office of European Affairs" or the "Office of Far Eastern Affairs."

"Hodge-Podge"
But when the Senate committee created to investigate non-essential government spending took a look at the Interior department set-up, it threw up its hands and said "Hodge-Podge."

The Interior department has branches like these: The Office of Fishery Conservation, the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, the U. S. Board on Geographical Names, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Geological Survey, and the National Park Service.

The same Senate committee gathered a list of government agencies doing "similar, identical or related" work and found that as many as 20 agencies may have units doing the same or similar work.

Part of the List
Here's part of the list, showing the number of units and what they're concerned with:

Housing, 22; standards and inspection, 27; statistics, 29; map making, 24; education, 16; waterpower and power, 16; insurance, 22; investigations, 46.

Some undoubtedly duplicate one another's work, and might be eliminated or rolled into one. Some very probably are necessary as they stand, separate.

A year ago President Truman asked Congress for power to merge a batch of government agencies. Congress gave it to him and last May he offered a plan.

It did not pretend to be a complete reorganization job—which would be a huge task—but proposed merging the work of about 28 government agencies. Congress spliced some of the plan, approved some last week.

WALLFLOWERS NEED PLANTING IN COOL DAYS

There are two distinct types of wallflower says Alfred Putz, in the New York Herald Tribune. The early Paris single strain does best if grown as an annual, but it requires an early start to make sure that the temperature will not be above 60 degrees Fahrenheit when the normal time for bud formation arrives. Since it takes about four months to reach that stage, the seed must be started not later than February to escape any warm spring weather. Keep the plants growing at 50 degrees Fahrenheit for a strong, normal development. In higher altitudes and along the seashore early March sowings usually are quite successful because of the lower night temperatures prevailing in those localities.

The biennial type of wallflowers, which includes the kinds with double flowers, also needs cool growing conditions, and the best time to sow seed in the vicinity of New York is early August. Sow the seed thinly in rows in the coldframe filled with porous soil. Keep the sowing moderately moist and shade against direct sunshine without shutting off air circulation.

Soil Drainage Is Vital
When a fair number of seedlings have emerged, remove the shade, because the growing plants need all the sunshine they can get. Water only when the soil shows signs of drying out to prevent damping off. If the seeds were distributed thinly in the rows the plants will not begin to crowd one another until the second true leaves have formed. At that time they are of the right size for their first transplanting to another section of the coldframe, which is to serve as their winter quarters.

Good soil drainage is particularly important during the winter months, and the addition of sand will help with heavy soils. If too sandy, add humus or well rotted leaves to the lower soil levels to encourage a well branched root growth without exposing the base of the plants to damping off.

Roots Dislike Loose Soil
A little completely rotted manure or dried cow manure may be mixed with the soil to furnish the food needs of the plants, but excess fertility is bound to lead to disappointment. Despite the need for good drainage, the roots dislike a loose soil, and for that reason it is well to tamp it down firmly before setting the plants. Also firm the soil well against the roots, using care to prevent crushing them. Eight inches between the plants will provide the space they need until next spring. Give the plants a chance to harden their tissues as the weather gets colder, but when severe freezing temperatures are in sight add the glass sash. Remove the sash altogether on sunny, frost-free days.

On cold days give a little ventilation by raising the sash several inches on the side opposite to the direction of the wind.

Some Place In Pots
With really cold winter weather arriving keep the sash closed, adding a hotbed mat or wooden shutters for extra protection. Also bank soil around the sides of the frame to keep severe frost out. Close attention must be given whenever the temperature moderates. During such spells take off the mat or shutters and ventilate during the frostfree sunny hours. Wallflowers are quite hardy and resent coddling. They like cool protection when the temperature falls below 25 degrees Fahrenheit. At all other times they should have some fresh air and light.

Some gardeners prefer to place the plants in individual pots, or three to a four-inch pot, which eliminates the possibility of shock in spring transplanting. Handled in this manner they will give plants for indoor use when in full flower. The soil in the pots should correspond with that prescribed for the coldframe, and several pieces of broken pot are needed over the drainage hole to insure good drainage.

About the middle of April the plants will be ready for transplanting to the garden. Remove them with a good root ball and select a dull day or one on which a light drizzling rain is falling for setting out. Give a thorough watering if no immediate rain is in sight.

Only the tips of stems on New Zealand spinach should be cut for use. New tips will grow, so that a few plants will supply the average family with greens all summer long.

Many Vegetables Best For Harvesting In Fall

Home gardeners who fail to sow in midsummer for the fall harvest miss some of the most satisfying experiences of the year. Many vegetables, difficult to grow well in the spring, are easy to grow in the fall, and they remain at top quality a longer time. They are in a rush to "go to seed" in the spring, and this destroys their table quality. But in the fall there is no such tendency. Either the high temperatures or the fact that the days are growing longer is believed to give some plants the signal to mature seed in mid-summer. But in the autumn, with nights cooler and days shorter, this signal is not received.

Good Until Frost
Chinese cabbage will make fine, tight heads. Spinach will develop with no tendency toward bolting, and lettuce will remain sweet and tender until killing frosts come. Beans and radishes can be sown for a fall crop.

Light frost gives some vegetables a superior flavor, collards, kale and endive among them. Brussels sprouts, the favorite British vegetable, is exclusively a fall crop in this country and will thaw out after a hard freeze and remain edible. Fall cabbage usually does better than early; kohlrabi and turnips have a much longer harvest season.

Growth Is Slower
Both in midsummer, when the fall crops are getting a start, and in the cool weather of autumn growth will be slower. So do not wait too long to get them started. Maturity dates given in seed catalogues are intended for fast spring growth, and in calculating fall growth the times should be lengthened appreciably.

Remember also that, as the season grows later, it is the early, quick-maturing varieties that should be sown again. So-called late varieties are those that take a long time to mature, and if sown in mid-summer they may be frozen before they are ready. But "early" varieties which mature quickly will give a harvest.

Keeping Bramble Ills Reduced
Success in growing raspberries, blackberries and dewberries, for home consumption or market, depends largely on how free the plants are maintained from destructive insect enemies and at least four widespread diseases. Like the price of liberty, freedom of brambles from these dangers calls for eternal vigilance, and this in turn for knowledge of the ills to be avoided or controlled.

The red-necked raspberry cane borer attacks all kinds of raspberries, blackberries and dewberries. The milk-white larva or grub burrows inside the canes and causes knots and lesions along the surface. When numerous, this invader greatly reduces berry yields. It can be effectively curbed by proper pruning and by roguing out all infested canes before winter.

The cane-girdler usually confines its ravages to raspberry plants, first seen as wilting tips of canes in June and July. Closer observation will reveal two rows of punctures around the cane about a half-inch apart. Between these rows of punctures the female beetle has placed her egg and made the punctures so the egg would not be crushed by continued plant growth. Satisfactory control of raspberry cane girdlers requires careful inspection of plants all summer and prompt roguing out of all wilted cane tips. Of course, the cut should be made below the girdling and the removed portion burned at once. Proper pruning helps greatly to keep girdlers reduced.

There are at least four common bramble diseases which warrant serious attention wherever these fruits are grown. They are mosaic, anthracnose, leaf curl, and streak. Several types of mosaic are likely to attack brambles; in general symptoms resemble among all of them—puckering of the leaves, light and dark mottling of leaf colorings and stunting of the new growth. Aphids and other insects may carry mosaic from infected to healthy plants. Separate black and red raspberries at least 100 to 200 feet and do not grow blackberries near raspberries. Cut out mosaic-infected plants whenever seen and burn them.

Anthracnose usually attacks black-

Asks Canneries To Guard Plant Waste

Harrisburg, July 29 (AP)—Claiming recreational areas are affected, Dr. Harry W. Weest, state health secretary, asked cannery operators today to prevent pollution of streams by cannery waste.

"It is appreciated that material and equipment shortages present a difficult problem in construction of waste treatment systems," he said, "but due to the fact cannery wastes enter the streams during the summer months, their effect is particularly noticeable from a recreation point of view."

"Untreated wastes from the canning of fruits and vegetables produce a particularly high degree of pollution, Dr. Weest declared, adding:

"Every effort must be made to prevent any pollution from this source." Because of the sanitary water board campaign most canneries in the state are either treating their wastes or keeping them out of the streams, he reported, but some of the systems must be improved.

Annual poppies should be sown where they are to grow, and their seed may be broadcast whenever the soil can be loosened an inch or so deep with a rake. They stand freezing weather without injury.

HUNGARY'S CASE MAY LEAD TO PARIS TROUBLES

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, July 29 (AP)—A sharp conflict already is shaping up for the Paris peace conference between Secretary of State Byrnes and Russian Foreign Minister Molotov over Soviet reparations demands on Hungary.

The United States is insisting that a new economic deal in Hungary is essential to establishment of a firm peace in Europe. It was protested strongly red army seizures of Hungarian foodstuffs and Soviet removals of Hungarian factories as well as current industrial production, contending the result is economic chaos in the Balkan nation. The protest, made public by the state department last night, highlights the difficulties confronting Byrnes as he sets out today for Paris and the 21-nation conference, opening Monday, which will write peace treaties for the former enemy states of Hungary, Italy, Bulgaria, Romania and Finland.

To See Byrnes

Truman arranged to see his Secretary of State aboard his plane at Washington about noon.

Byrnes briefly reviewed some of his Paris projects at a news conference. He said that he planned on Monday to confer with the three American members of a Joint Anglo-American committee on Palestine. The aim is to fix American policy on the committee's proposal for partitioning Palestine between Jews and Arabs in connection with the plan for immigration of 100,000 Jews.

It was learned from informed persons that the British are ready to accept the principle of the immediate immigration of 100,000 Jews, as urged by Mr. Truman, but feel the project cannot be carried out until after further conferences with Jewish and Arab leaders.

On another aspect of his Paris mission, Byrnes said that he expected American troops to be withdrawn from Italy within 90 days after the Italian peace treaty is signed.

BARBECUE FIRE

Los Angeles, (AP)—This barbecue fire was about as big as they come. It destroyed the Albert & Zola Barbecue Co., with loss including damage to other buildings, totaling $80,000.

BLIND MAN NABS THIEF

Philadelphia, July 29 (AP)—Edward Hoffman, 38-year-old newsdealer is blind—but he knows the difference in the "feel" of a Japanese dollar and American one.

He proved that recently when his sense of touch and memory of a voice led to the arrest of John Capehart, 19, on charge of larceny by trick.

Hoffman told police the following story:

Last Wednesday, a customer gave him a bill for a ten-cent candy bar and 90 cents change. When the newsdealer took the bill to a bank, he was told it was a Japanese dollar. He felt the bill carefully and noted the lack of thread common to an American bill.

When a voice asked him for a candy-bar yesterday, Hoffman continued, he thought he recognized it as the same customer of Wednesday.

Stress Quality In New National Guard

Harrisburg, July 29 (AP)—Recruiting for the new Pennsylvania National Guard must be based on "quality rather than quantity," says its commander, Maj. E. J. Stackpole.

Setting his sights for an ultimate enlistment of 40,000 officers and men, Gen. Stackpole said stress will day's transaction. The bill that was handed him was soft and threadless. The newsdealer seized the customer and shouted for help.

NEED TRAINED PERSONNEL IN MENTAL WORK

(Editor's note: This is the second of two stories explaining what the government has just done to fight mental disease.)
By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, July 29 (P)—Shocking stories and pictures of the treatment of patients in some state mental hospitals were printed in the past year.
Behind such stories are reasons like these:
Not enough money spent on mental hospitals and not enough trained people—like psychiatrists and attendants—to handle the patients.
$10,000,000 To Spend
The government has stepped into the field and will build, probably in about two years, a national mental health institute. It also will have $10,000,000 a year to spend on:
Its own research into mental illness, helping with research in schools and hospitals, training young specialists, and assisting the states.
Here is a picture of the mental health problem as given by the Senate committee on education and labor after studying the field:
The most serious deficiency in the field of mental health is the lack of trained personnel.
There are only 4,000 psychiatrists in this country, including those in the armed forces, but about 16,000 are needed.
Great Needs
A mental health program able to do the job that needs to be done would require an additional 1,700 psychologists, 15,000 nurses, 4,500 psychiatric social workers, 1,000 occupational therapists, 15,000 attendants, and some 3,000 other technical personnel.
The first line of defense against mental illness is the general medical doctor but "today the general practitioner is inadequately trained to handle mental illness."
The committee said further: "Psychiatric training today is inadequate in perhaps one-third of our medical schools and it was non-existent at the time when many of our older physicians received their medical training."
Accordingly, a mental health program must call for the encouragement of adequate psychiatric training in medical schools for the improvement and expansion of teaching facilities.

CITE UNIONTOWN JUVENILE PLAN
Uniontown, Pa., July 29 (P)—Juvenile clinics and a school psychologist have enabled this historic Fayette county coal mining community to reduce juvenile delinquency by 15 to 20 per cent during the past year, juvenile probation officer William G. Gladden has disclosed.
The Pennsylvania department of welfare termed the two-pronged approach—clinics for boys and girls who run afoul of the law and the psychologist for unruly classroom children—as "outstanding in the state."
The clinics are held weekly, with church, business, school and civic leaders acting as "fatherly advisers" for youngsters referred to them by the juvenile probation officer.
The school psychologist, Glenn W. Irvin, makes a thorough study of the children and their background.
"Once the behavior of a delinquent is understood, a planned program of individual or group therapy is evolved, using all the community's resources in readjusting the child's environment," he said.
Recreation centers and playgrounds are also helping cut juvenile delinquency here. More than 48,000 youngsters have visited the play spots since their opening, not only cutting the juvenile delinquency problem but bringing a sharp decline in traffic accidents involving children.

Someone To Believe In

By Helen R. Woodward
Chapter 11
When it was over, Greer stumbled back-stage, the thunderous applause ringing in her ears. It seemed as if the audience, which had come largely from curiosity, had sensed her ordeal and paid generous tribute to her unflinching courage. As Buzzy Barton said under his breath, "They know class when they see it—thank God!" And it was in the nature of a prayer answered, for he had been secretly worried concerning the ballyhoo surrounding Greer's debut, knowing that Greer, herself, had been entirely unconscious of it.
She came back for an encore, then several curtain calls, and at last stood, flushed and trembling, behind the closed door of her dressing room. She knew that she was free now to join Jeff Mansfield at his table until she should sing again later in the evening. But she could only stand there, tears glistening on her dark lashes—utterly spent with emotion, but proud that she had not failed, that she had had the courage to make the audience like her.
Rocky Alverson, leaving the secluded corner where he had watched Greer's performance—watched that golden personality literally reach out and take the audience into its charmed circle—acknowledged to himself that he was trembling, that there was a rim of moisture about his mouth, and that his heart was beating in a wholly unaccustomed way. "She hates me. I suppose!" he was thinking, "but she won't be afraid any more. She'll be too angry!"
A distinguished-looking man accosted him—a stranger in town evidently—for he asked, "Who was that amazingly beautiful girl?" But Rocky did not answer, brushing the stranger unceremoniously out of his way. He was intent now on making his way back-stage.
In the darkness he reached Greer's dressing-room, tapped lightly. After a moment she stood there, her lashes still fringed with tears, her small head thrown back defiantly. When she saw that it was Rocky, she drew herself up sharply and assumed what he had come to think of as her "untouchable look."
He spoke softly, quickly, above the blare of the music. "There's no use to tell you that you were magnificent! And a decided sensation. You know that already."
"Then there was no need in your speaking to me at all, was there?" He flushed. "You have a right to be angry. I'll admit I publicized you pretty thoroughly."
Her lip curled. "You could at least have warned me that you were playing me up as a notorious character."
"Should you have accepted the job if you had known?"
He thought she drooped a little at the swift, stabbing question. "I suppose I should have. I have to make a living, you know."
"Then I don't see why you're so wrought up about it. You must remember that I was quite frank with you—that I never posed as a philanthropist. After all, I must make the Melody club a paying proposition, or else close it up!" After a moment, he went on. "Now that you know I gave you the job because I knew your name would draw a crowd, do you want to keep on with it?"
Her eyes met his squarely. "Of course I intend to keep it, if you still want me—unless part of the job is pretending to be friendly with you!"
His one-sided grin appeared but back deep in his eyes was an unfathomable look. "You may look on me as your bitter enemy if that will make things any easier. And frankly, I want you to stay. The Melody club will make money off of you!"
She said "Thank you!" and turned away.
There was a light knock at the door and she opened it to see a tall man with twinkling blue eyes and graying hair, a man whose face brought back a rush of childhood memories. He held out his hand and his smile was warm and kind. "May a very old friend offer congratulations to the star of the evening?"
She caught his hand and held it tightly, her face showing her pleasure. "Stephen! It's Stephen Redmon! Oh, I'm so very glad to see you!"
Stephen laughed. "I believe you really are! It's great to be greeted like that, Greer, but then you had the faculty, even as a little girl, of making a fellow seem important."
"But how do you happen to be here at the Melody Club?"
"In a telephone conversation Isabel told me you were to sing tonight. Do you think I would have missed it?"
"If I'd known you were out there I'd have felt much better," she confessed and he laughed. "If you felt half as well as you looked and sang—"
They talked of old times, of happy remembrances and Greer fairly clung to Stephen Redmon as if he had been her father. She reflected that he was as charming, as handsome as ever, and wondered why her Aunt Harriet had ever parted with him. He smiled suddenly in a very gay manner. "I saw Harriet out front, but I didn't dare speak to her! She probably would have frozen me completely!"
And Greer voiced the thought in her mind, "Aunt Harriet has been wonderfully kind to me, and I love her—but there are times when I believe she must be slightly goofy!"
Jeff came in search of Greer and she introduced the two men. A quick liking sprang up between them. The three went out to sit at Jeff's table, to talk and dance a bit, and talk some more. Jeff laughed, "I've learned more about you tonight, Greer, than I've ever known before!"
"Stephen knows all my deep, dark past! Look, darling," she went on. "Harriet has seen us! She waved just now!"
"Who's the gent that's squiring her?" Stephen wanted to know.
"A salesman from the city from whom she buys merchandise!"
"I was afraid for a moment you might say 'he's her present husband!'"
She looked at him in surprise. "But she's quite unattached now, you know—"
Could he still love the cold, brisk woman in the smart black gown? She shook her head at the strange ways of the world!
After she had sung again, they left Stephen in melancholy solitude at the table and Jeff drove Greer home. She breathed a sigh of relief as they drove down the tree-lined roadway, leaving the Melody club behind them.

DEFER PLANNING ON EXTENSION OF SUPER-HIGHWAY

Harrisburg, July 29 (P)—Planning for a new relief highway between Philadelphia and the state capitol has been deferred by the commonwealth until scientific traffic surveys undertaken by the state are completed, Highway Secretary Ray P. Smock disclosed Friday.
Governor Martin announced last year he favored construction of new highway facilities between the two cities to relieve traffic congestion but said no decision had been reached on its location nor what type of road would be built.
"We cannot do anything on that until the traffic survey at Harrisburg is completed and the results are compiled and analyzed," Smock explained. "We want to know first where traffic is coming from and where it is trying to go."
Making Thorough Count
W. H. Herman, chief research engineer of the Highways department, said the Harrisburg traffic count—the most complete ever attempted by the state—will be extended to other cities as soon as possible.
He said the study will not only determine the origin and destination of traffic moving through the cities but also problems involving parking, truck, bus and taxicab movements.
"When it is finished we will have the most authentic information possible concerning highway and parking facilities," Herman said.
No Guessing
A staff of nearly 70 persons has been organized to make the survey, with Philadelphia one of the next metropolitan areas on the list for a similar scientific check-up. Similar studies also are contemplated for Reading, Johnstown, Allentown, Bethlehem and possibly Erie.
"We have already made an external survey (checking origin and destination of vehicles on the street) in Pittsburgh that gave us a great deal of valuable information," Herman added, explaining that in the Harrisburg study house-to-house interviews have been added.
"We not only ask where they came from and where they are going to but also whether it is for business or pleasure and where do they intend to park," Herman said. "It takes all the guessing out of future highway developments."

ATOM BOMB IS SURE DEATH TO SHIPS IN AREA

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Writer)
Aboard the USS Appalachia, July 29 (P)—The atomic bomb, which has twice proved conclusively it is sure death to ships of all categories within a half-mile radius, probably would have killed all men on decks had crews manned the target vessels in Bikini lagoon for Thursday's underwater test.
That is the calm, careful judgment of Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of "Operation Crossroads."
"It is probable that personnel on deck would have been goners, if not immediately, at least later on," he said today in a post-blast assessment of the weapon which yesterday:
"Killer of Ships"
Sank the 26,100-ton battleship Arkansas and the 33,000-ton carrier Saratoga; so grievously wounded the Japanese battleship Nagato that she still is developing a list; left the destroyer Hughes in imminent danger of sinking; sank some lighter craft; and spread so much radioactivity that 24 hours later 36 square miles of water are contaminated.
Don Whitehead, of the Associated Press, after a flight over the lagoon today, said yesterday's bomb proved it is a "killer" of ships within a half-mile radius — the same radius of "sudden death" in the July 1 air burst test as well as of the death circle imprinted on the New Mexico sands last year.
In the two Bikini tests, no ship within that radius has survived and the power of the bomb has extended beyond it.
Not Fully Checked
The radioactivity within the lagoon bars a thorough check, but it is definitely known that yesterday's thunderous explosion accounted for the Arkansas, the Saratoga, a concrete yard orler, a tank-landing ship and the medium landing-ship from which the bomb was suspended.
Aerial observers had said positions of buoys indicated that five of the submarines submerged for the test were sunk but Admiral Blandy said today the evidence was inconclusive.
Charles McNulty, of the Associated Press, flying over the lagoon today reported that "two or three" submarines were sunk.
Blandy said that, had the ships been manned Thursday, in addition to loss of life on the decks it is highly probable that many of those below decks would have been injured by "the physical shock of the blast."
The admiral also observed:
The unmanned drone airplane 6,000 feet directly over the bomb burst was damaged even though this explosion had to travel through a cushion of water to reach the air.
The bomb was about equal to others of the Nagasaki type. (This refers to the atom bomb which wrecked one-third of that Japanese city during the war.)
Transports and other lightweight ships failed to sink in any numbers because they were farther away from the center of the explosion than the Arkansas and Saratoga.
The animals, now isolated by radioactive waters from attention, have a ten days supply of food and water on the target ships—if they are alive.

Hanover Man Fined On Cruelty Charge

Columbus, Ohio, July 29 (P)—Lloyd G. Wolf, of Hanover, Pa., was arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals and fined $25 by Justice of the Peace V. Glenn Smith who decided that loading 114 dogs in a single was unreasonable crowding.
The city's humane society officials said Wolf's cargo was confined in four-foot square compartments—as many as seven dogs to a compartment—and were without food and water for 30 hours after the truck broke down Thursday morning near here.
Wolf said he was trucking the dogs from a Hanover kennel to an Indianapolis pharmaceutical firm for experimental uses.
Justice Smith said the dogs, fed and watered in the city's dog pound, would be hauled to Indianapolis in two loads.

Harrisburg Drops Farther Behind

(By The Associated Press)
A 9½ game gap separated the leading Wilmington Blue Rocks from second-place Harrisburg in the interstate league standings today on the heels of the Blue Rocks double win over Lancaster while the Senators were losing twice to Sunbury.
Wilmington socked two Red Roses pitchers yesterday for a combined total of 13 hits to win, 5 to 2 and 2 to 1.
Sunbury's Yankees outslugged Harrisburg, 11 to 6 and 8 to 7.
In other games, Hagerstown maintained a three-game lead over fourth-place Sunbury by edging York, the cellar team, 5-4 and 3-2, while Allentown was dividing a doubleheader with Trenton—the Canaries winning the first, 10-7, then bowing to Trenton 9 to 1 in the finale.
Tonight's schedule at Harrisburg, Sunbury at Wilmington (2), York at Trenton, Lancaster at Hagerstown.
